NASREDDIN HODJA

The Association of Cartoonists maintains that in the struggle for a more tolerant and peaceful world, humour in other words, the language, caricature is the most effective weapon against the thought that does not laugh. Bearing this aim in mind, the Association of Cartoonists is organizing each year International Nasreddin Hodja Cartoon Contest to the living memory of Nasreddin Hodja, Turkish master of popular humour. Nasreddin Hodja, the master of Turkish humourists, lived in Akşehir between 1208 - 1285, He is partly medrese, educated (Muslim Theological School), partly self-trained. Historical information on his life and personality is highly limited but from what has travelled word-of-mouth from generation to generation we understand him to be intensely amusing as it is stimulating and giving food for thought. He is so much at one with the people that perhaps it is truer to say reality. Nasreddin Hodja constitutes the nucleus of Turkish folk humour, with stories emanating from his personality being woven by the people around his character century after century. So that the humour of Hodja has reached our day as vigorous and as close to people's heart as ever.
